Policies relating to slavery and human trafficking

Vesuvius is committed to protecting the health and safety of our employees, customers, suppliers, contractors, visitors and others affected by our operations. We do not condone Slavery or Human Trafficking. We will never knowingly engage in these activities in our own business and will not tolerate them if we find them within our supply chain. Vesuvius' Code of Conduct expressly prohibits forced or child labour in our operations. This is supported by our Human Rights Policy which reflects the principles contained within the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Labour Organisation's Fundamental Conventions on Labour Standards and the United Nations Global Compact.

Our supply chain and supplier assessment procedures

Vesuvius sources raw materials, other tradeable goods and ancillary supplies for our manufacturing processes on a global, regional and site-specific basis. The Group VP Procurement and his team are responsible for purchasing identified categories of major raw materials used across the Group, together with the procurement of logistics. Our largest purchasing spend is raw materials (predominantly in the form of high-quality technical grade treated minerals and chemicals) the majority of which is organised, monitored and controlled by Global Category Directors, reporting to the Group VP Procurement. Individuals within the Group Purchasing organisation are also responsible for global logistics procurement, supplier quality and development, procurement intelligence and standardisation of purchasing processes. All purchasing of goods and services not undertaken at the Group level is undertaken by the Business Units and local sites, being sourced from both global and local suppliers. Operational responsibility for integration of modern slavery into business practices is held by our purchasing professionals, at Group and business unit level.

Under our supplier assessment programme, we engage with suppliers on their business practices to ensure quality and security of supply to Vesuvius. During 2020 we initiated a programme to introduce supplier due diligence with respect to Environment, Social and Governance issues engaging an external rating agency to support this. The initial roll out included our largest suppliers and those identified as higher risk during our Modern Slavery Risk Assessment. We continue to add sizeable and prioritised suppliers to this work over time. The supplier assessment programme continues to seek to ensure that the risk of modern slavery is managed and governed with zero-tolerance wherever we operate.

Risk assessment and management

We have previously conducted a risk assessment of our purchasing activities seeking to identify, by location and industry, where we consider the potential risks of modern slavery to be the highest in our supply chain. This increased our understanding of the potential risk areas and assisted us in strengthening our oversight and procedures. Our risk assessment identified 4 industries that pose a higher risk of modern slavery for Vesuvius;

1. Mining and Extractive industries (raw materials)
2. Textiles (PPE & work clothing)
3. Transport and packaging
4. Maintenance, cleaning, agricultural work and food preparation

As our spend with mining and extractive industry suppliers is far greater than the other three industries, and the number and diversity of suppliers is the greatest, we have been focusing our efforts on these industries. We have deepened our investigation of higher-risk raw materials, based on the studies carried out by Drive Sustainability and the Responsible Minerals Initiative on the responsible sourcing of materials in the automotive and electronics industries, with which our portfolio of raw materials shares many commonalities. In 2023, 53% of our raw material spend was covered by this risk assessment. Four categories of raw materials were identified as presenting potentially higher risk: mica, graphite, bauxite and derived materials (aluminium, alumina), and platinum.

Our modern slavery risk assessment is reviewed regularly to update for business changes and input from across our business. As part of this review, we reconsider our assessment of the higher risk industries for Vesuvius. Our assessment remains consistent with the initial risk assessment performed seven years ago. During this time, we have conducted several risk assessments and reviews to identify any emerging risks related to modern slavery. As a result of growing concerns over forced labour, Group Procurement has increased its focus on looking for evidence of child and forced labour.

Training

A Group-wide modern slavery training programme targeting senior purchasing employees aimed at raising awareness of the issues, was previously launched, briefing management on the different types of human rights abuses, higher risk industries for Vesuvius and providing them with information to assist them in identifying the warning signs of slavery and human trafficking. Since 2017 we have utilised an online training course to supplement this initial awareness training. Supplier facing employees are enrolled into the online training which covers our policies on human rights, industry sector risks, key warning signs, 'red flags', supplier on-boarding protocols and instructions on how to escalate concerns. In addition, our ongoing programme of compliance training given to management globally includes Modern Slavery risks and red flags, with management requested to disseminate this information to their teams.

Reporting concerns

We continue to encourage our employees to remain vigilant to potential modern slavery and human trafficking abuses and escalate any concerns they may have with respect to these issues. Employees can report their concerns to management or through the independent 'Speak up' helpline, where reports are reviewed and investigated independently. During 2023, we reviewed the operation of our existing independent whistleblowing helpline providing channels necessary to escalate any concerns (including modern slavery, human rights, and workplace safety) to ensure it meets the requirements of the Whistleblowing Directive

(2019/1937). As a result of the changes, we have better knowledge, remain alert to potential areas of increased risk and are able to investigate reported cases more comprehensively. Where issues are highlighted through business channels these are required to be escalated to senior management for review and resolution. As with all incident reporting, individuals who raise concerns on modern slavery in good faith will never be the target of retaliation.

Looking ahead

During 2024, we will continue engaging with an external supplier rating agency with an initial focus on those in the identified higher risk jurisdictions or categories. This review will be conducted with assistance from Group Purchasing and local purchasing teams.
